THE DIGITAL SUPERECHO: EMBODIMENT UNDER THE ALGORITHMIC GAZE

BTPP is pleased to host a talk by Alessandra Lemma. This talk is based on a chapter from Alessandra Lemma's forthcoming book Psychotechnical becomings: psychoanalysis, identity, desire and mourning in times of AI and digital mediation.

This lecture introduces the concept of the digital superego to conceptualize how algorithmic systems reorganize adolescent embodiment. Under the algorithmic gaze, the body becomes a monitored surface subjected to perpetual judgment, where recognition is quantified and conditional. Drawing on clinical material, it explores how interoceptive awareness - the felt sense of bodily interiority - is displaced by exteroceptive evaluation, a mode of relating to the body as an object of scrutiny. Psychoanalytic practice, in turn, is called upon to reclaim the body as a site of uncertainty and relational encounter, resisting the algorithmic conversion of selfhood into performance.
